

FAMILY PARTICIPATION GUIDE

Difficulties in communication with immigrant families and schools are a very common issue pointed out in the literature and in the reports of international organizations on the education of immigrant children. In order to provide support to families and teachers in this regard, a family participation guide has been prepared to meet the needs that will be determined concretely during the project on ensuring school-parent unity. The content of the guide covers effective communication methods with migrant children and their families, their possible needs, families' access to school and the obstacles that may be experienced in ensuring continuity of access. In addition, in a section of the booklet, as an example application to immigrant family participation, the family mathematics workshop to be held during the project is given in detail, including the preparation and application stages. The guide has been prepared in both e-booklet and printed form.

The Family Education Program (Booklet)

The Family Education Program was developed in a unique process by adhering to the principles of curriculum development. In the preparation of the program, expert and competent academicians, relevant public institutions and organizations, private sector representatives and non-governmental organizations were benefited from. Believing that this training program for families will meet an important need, I would like to thank those who contributed to the preparation process of the program, our trainers who brought the field trainings together with our people, and our families who participated in the trainings and transferred the information they received to their daily lives.

The booklet has been prepared for the training of trainers and contains very important advice to professionals from the field.
